Continuation of 5. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: Applicant's arguments are not persuasive. Applicant's arguments center around the assertion that O'Toole does not teach a second agent to update a user rule page. The Examiner respectfully disagrees. Each time a server targets an offer to a user, the server sends along a smart digital offer object (col. 7, lines 24-26). A client "avatar" controls the release of the user's personal profile information to the server (col. 9, lines 22-61). This updated profile information is used by the server to target future offers to the user through smart digital offer objects (col. 10, lines 18-28). Therefore, O'Toole teaches the use of various objects (including "avatars") to select and deliver offers of interest to a user and update a user's profile accordingly.
